Big Leak Shuts Off Mokena Water

Monday morning the Mokena water tower showed only five feet of water and despite constant pumping the water level did not show any gain. Toward evening the discovery was made that a truck had hit a hydrant near the Braun pool hall and a pipe connected with the water main had broken off. A drain tile was located near the main and the escaping water ran off thru the tile, so that about as fast as water was being pumped into the water tower, it was running out thru the drain tile. All the water users in the village were shut off until repairs could be made. A number of other leaks were found and were repaired. A new fire hydrant put in by the PWA this spring near the Horras place on Neithammer avenue was found filled with small pebbles and dirt. The hydrant was cleaned out so it is in operating condition. It is thought the pebbles and dirt got in when the new water main was laid.

Harris-Schmadeke Funeral Home Opens In Former Henry Mansion

Orville Schmadeke, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schmadeke of Orland Park and Eugene Harris of Joliet have opened a new funeral home in the old Jacob Henry mansion in Joliet, which is located at 112 South Eastern avenue.

The old Henry mansion is an interesting landmark of Joliet and in its day was one of the show places of Joliet. It was built at a cost of $90,000 and the glories of its past are still evident today. There are 17 rooms in the building with numerous fire places. Marble imported from Italy is still in use and a carpet imported from Paris, France at a cost of thousands of dollars, 60 years ago, is also in use and shows very little signs of wear after its long usage.

Massive doors with beautiful panels swing on massive brass hinges. These doors are of oak, nearly three inches thick. A beautiful carved winding stairway leads from the main hall to the upper floors.

The first floor rooms are used for the funeral home and the business offices. The appointments are modern in every respect and this new funeral home is one of the finest of its kind in Joliet.

A Letter Of Appreciation

An open letter to our many friends from the leader of the Sunshine 4-H club:

I want to take this opportunity to say thanks to all the fine friends and neighbors who came from far and near to see our play, "George In A Jam", which was given by my club members.

Gratitude means a lot and is deep in my heart. Your generous cooperation and the help you have given me during my four years has been greatly appreciated.

The play was given to educate the young folks of the community in the spirit which predominates the 4-H club work.

The work of the 4-H club is very educating and gives every boy and girl a chance to meet other fine young folks. As you get out into the world you will find many fine boys and girls who have made good citizens, simply because they had the fine training in early life.

We are starting a winter project. If there is any girl who would like to join, please get in touch with me or any of my members, we will be glad to have you join.

I realize the value of true friendship. The girls of the club have grown very dear to me.

The proceeds from the play after the expenses were paid, was evenly divided among my club members, so that they may carry on in the club work next year.

I hope some of the older girls will be able to be leaders in the coming year, so that we may have a larger club.

Do something useful the short time we are here and make the best better. Again I say thank you.

Sincerely

HILDA KAMPE

Women's Clubs Meet In Hamilton Park Field House

The first district meeting of the Third District of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs was held Tuesday in the Hamilton Park Field House at 72nd street and Normal Avenue in Chicago with over 500 women attending.

The morning session was most interesting, the theme of the subject "What Patriotism Means", as discussed from a Business man's idea—the veteran's—the minister's—a mother's and a student's.

Ideas as brought out by the various speakers were: that our first duty, is our duty as an American citizen. A solique was given of what the Unknown Soldier would think of our flag; he would wonder if it still was the same flag that he brought back from France? That flag with the red in it that was not a red of communism but the red of courage; the white, being for the purity of the motives of those who gave us our democracy, the blue which meant loyalty to his principals, the stripes were the rays of dawn of a glorious living, the stars that give us a bright, steady light for our future years.

Peace for our country and the world at large was strongly advocated, the veteran speaking, said the time to go into war outside our country was when the president of the United States lead the army, followed by each members of Congress and the Senate, then by all the wealthy citizens, with Mr. DuPont ahead of the president and with the soldier seventy miles in the rear.

In the afternoon session, the Colors were presented by the Morgan Park Military academy boys.

Motion pictures were shown of our navy activities.

Sixteen women from Tinley Park and Orland Park attended this meeting.

"Will he see again?"
"Jane, my girl, give me another two weeks, if I thought anybody, anywhere, would do anything more than I'm doing, I'd put him on the cars tonight. It's time, Jane, time."

If Jane expected to get much information about the Denison fire at home, she was disappointed. When she reported it to her father, he was silent—professing still to feel outraged at her insubordination. McCrossen was more communicative, even sympathetic; but he knew little about the fire.

After a painful night, Jane rose early to go again into town. In the yard she encountered McCrossen.

"Ridin' out?" he asked.

"I am."

"I'll saddle up for you."

"Have the horses been fed?"

"Yep."

"I'll saddle up myself."

"Your father rode over to the pastures with Page this mornin'," volunteered McCrossen, walking alongside Jane. She made no answer; indeed, she rather quickened her pace; her companion stepping up his own.

"Your father left word I was to ride out with you, if you went off the ranch."

"I don't need anybody to ride out with me."

"I don't care a rap what the old man says. I'll ride out with you if you want me. If you don't, say so."

"I don't."

"O. K."

Jane undertook to mount.

"Look here, girlie!" said McCrossen suddenly. "Why don't you like me?" Without further preface than a laugh he caught her in his arms. "I'll do anything to please you."

Jane, struggling angrily, stood pined. He laughed immoderately at her efforts to tear herself away. She rained blows on him with her fists. "Let me go!" she panted. "I hate you."

Still laughing, he tried to talk down her anger. She got away from him. "Hate me as much as you like, Janie, but I'm goin' to have you. I'll kill any man that tries to take you away from me," he continued coolly. "I don't care a damn who he is—just remember that, girlie. And I'd kill you, too, if you married another man."

Panting, and furious with anger and fear, she got into her hand the riding whip dangling from her wrist and lashed him across the face and head. As she dashed away, McCrossen drew paper and tobacco from his pocket, rolled a cigarette, and licking the paper's edge as he looked after Jane riding toward Denison's ranch, struck a match, lighted up, and started for the bunkhouse.

Jane, her heart beating tumultuously, galloped swiftly along the trail, completely upset by McCrossen's bullying and the worry in her breast.

Instead of heading first for town, she rode over to Denison's ranch.

The sight of the ranch-house ruins was a shock, even though she tried to steel herself against it. A man down near the corral was leading one of Denison's horses to the barn.

"Are you Ben Page?" asked Jane abruptly.

"Yes'm."

"How did this happen, Ben?" she asked sympathically.

"You tell," he returned sullenly.

"Tell me all about it, Ben. I'm from Gunlock and a friend of Bill Denison's."

He regarded her with suspicion. "Must be the only one he's got over there," he growled.

Jane swallowed. "I hope it isn't as bad as that," she exclaimed. "What caused this dreadful fire, Ben?"

"How the hell should I know?"

"Don't know what caused the fire, eh? Well, you ought to at least know how to be civil to a lady. Since you don't, I advise you to come over and take a lesson from your brother Bull." Jane galloped swiftly away, more than ever upset mentally. Once in town, she sought Dr. Carpy.

She encountered him in the street. They walked together back to his office.

"How are you, Jane?" asked the doctor.

"I just rode in from Bill's. He has Ben Page there looking after things, and the insolent blockhead wouldn't even answer me civilly when I tried to find out how it happened—so I rode away into town."

"That fire has stirred Bill up terribly—out of all proportion to its importance. It maybe was done to annoy him."

Jane looked frightened. "Why, doctor! What do you mean? Do you believe the ranch house was set on fire?"

Carpy was taken aback. He had said more than he meant to. "Why, no one can tell for sure about that, of course."

Some drunken Indian might have set it afire."

"To annoy Bill?" asked Jane incredulously.

"You can't tell," persisted the doctor, gathering courage as he proceeded. "Bill may have made one of 'em mad sometime—ordered him off the place or something."

"How is he coming on, doctor?"

"All right, so far. It'll take time to tell the story, Jane, just I said."

"Could I see him this morning, do you think?"

"If it was anybody else on earth, the answer would be no. If you go over, don't stay long, and tell Sister Virginia it's O. K. with me." "Be back here at twelve to take lunch with me—promise?"

"I promise."

"And remember"—Carpy raised the forefinger of his right hand—"mum's the word."

The utter absence of authentic details concerning the cause of the fire called for a more active effort on the part of the imagination; and this in turn indicated its stimulation at Jake Spotts' bar. So the old guard were gathered on this morning still discussing the "outrage."

Among those grouped at the inner end of Spotts' long bar were three veterans of the frontier. Henry Sawdy, calm, portly, pulled reflectively at his long-horned mustachios and fingered his well-filled glass without raising it to his lips. John Lefever, likewise full-bodied as old port, whistling "sotto vokey," as Sawdy described it, twirled his glass and listened for the next fire theory offered by Jim McAlpin, the thin, nervous, weather-beaten-faced liveryman.

Toward this trio there now sauntered, coming in from the front door, the raw-boned, lantern-jawed, unshaven Bill Pardaloe.

"What's the last news, boys?" he asked in a general appeal.

"Just like the first and that's nothin' at all," said McAlpin. "Give me the same, Oscar, with more bitters. Hold on, boys! By the Lord, if I'm alive, there comes Ben Page now."

Three Veterans of the Frontier.

"Hey! Ben! This way," cried Sawdy as the stumpy bowlegged cowman walked down the barroom towards them. "Come along and wet up."

"Well, Ben," demanded Sawdy, when the glasses were set down, "what about the fire?"

"I jumped through the window."

Neither questions nor alcoholic stimulation could draw out more definite information than this. As to the origin of the blaze, Page had no theory or knowledge.

The longer the group tarried, the more resentful they grew at the thought of Bill Denison's being burned out. It was at last decided to let Sawdy and Pardaloe ride to Denison's together to make an "official investigation." They took the Reservation trail and halfway out met Bob Scott riding into town.

The two adventurers halted Bob, explained their errand, and asked him to join them.

Scott wheeled his horse around, and the three galloped for Denison's ranch.

That night, late, Sawdy, Lefever, McAlpin, Pardaloe, and Ben Page met by the dim light of a lantern in the stuffy-smelling harness room of McAlpin's barn.

"Boys," began Sawdy, gravely, when the doors were carefully shut and outer approaches examined, "it's just we figured—dirty work out at Bill's ranch. It was lucky Pardaloe and I picked up Bob Scott. He's magic on trailin'. If it hadn't been for Bob, Pardaloe and me'd been scratchin' around Bill's place yet. There wasn't a thing to show where or how the fire started—the job was too well done. But what couldn't be covered up was the ground sign in the yard. Who'd been there last? Lucky for us, there wa'n't many horses'd been runnin' around the yard. Bob spotted three; one was Music, Bill's horse—Ben's been ridin' her. The other two were Gunlock horses, boys. One that Jane rides—that was fresh track. But there was older track—of a Gunlock horse."

"Gunlock horse?" echoed Lefever.

In the murky light of the lantern Sawdy pulled his mustachio deliberately. "A Gunlock horse," he repeated. "And it was the sorrel gelding that most of you've seen. Bob knows every horse in the hills by his hoofs, and as luck would have it, he himself traded the sorrel to McCrossen about a year ago.

"That horse was over to Bill's place maybe thirty-six to forty-eight hours before Scott read the sign. The man that rode that horse over to Denison's night before last knows a lot about who started that fire. Who rode it?"

"That horse, boys, has been rode by Barney Rebstock since he's roosted over at Gunlock with his old pal and boss, Gus Van Tambel. After Bob fixed on the sorrel, Pardaloe sends him up around by Gunlock to scout the question, who rides the sorrel. Then Pardaloe and I rode straight back to town to send out Carpy. You see, Bob could appear up at Gunlock casual-like and ask questions and nobody would think anythin' about it. Bob rides in and out there often."

"Of course, he had to be careful. But there's two honest men over there, Bull Page and the Chink. Bob set down in the kitchen for a cup of coffee—hadn't had no breakfast—and buzzes the Chink. Finally he comes around to the sorrel he'd traded in to the ranch, and asks who rides it now. 'Rebstock,' says the Chink."

"Then Bob waits for Bull Page. He asks Bull whether he thinks there's any chance to get McCrossen to trade the sorrel back to him. Finally he asks Bull who's ridin' the sorrel. Bull says since Barney Rebstock come back, he asked McCrossen if he could fasten onto the sorrel and McCrossen said yes."

Sawdy paused again. There was a general silence.

"That's the story, boys. No, hold on! Barney and Van Tambel left the ranch at daylight this mornin' for the pastures, with Barney on the sorrel!"

"Story enough," grunted McAlpin. "But," he continued, "Barney's pretty cute. If he was goin' to start a fire, wouldn't he take somebody else's horse?"

"I thought that way for a while," intervened Pardaloe. "But Barney can be careless, too—you know that, boys. So I asked Bob to find out, was Barney out that night of the fire; was the sorrel out. Old Bull is a nighthawk around Gunlock—you know that. He may have suspected what was in Bob's mind, but he wouldn't give a whoop anyway. He hates Barney like poison. He told Bob that Barney was the only man outside the bunkhouse that night. And he heard him ridin' away."

Sawdy stopped the general discussion. "Boys, what you goin' to do?"

Pardaloe rose. Some experience in frontier courts of this kind had convinced him that it was time for a sheriff or an ex-sheriff to be moving on. As a one-time representative of the law laid down in statute books, he felt it incumbent on himself to take no further part in the deliberations.

"Run along, Bill," nodded Sawdy. "We'll see you later—maybe."

With the ex-sheriff gone, Sawdy called for opinion as to what, if any, action should be taken.

"If any!" exclaimed McAlpin, echoing the words scornfully. "Man alive, you know it ain't a question of 'if any' action. It's a question of what kind of action."

"Got a rope here, McAlpin?"

"Got 'em big and little, old and new."

"Don't be too hard on Barney," interposed Lefever. "The least you can do is to soap the rope for him."

"Don't misunderstand me, boys," interposed Sawdy. "I want to string him up and down a few times to get the story out of him. A little argument like that'll bring it."

"Boys," said McAlpin, "I've an idea you can catch Rebstock right here in town. If he set the fire, he's got money plenty. It's burnin' holes in his pockets. Catch your cat in the Red Front saloon; call him out the back door; set him on a horse and ride him down to the bridge—that's gentlemanly and private."

"It's the first time in your life, but I guess you are right, McAlpin," said Sawdy. "We've just got to set the rope watch on Barney."

Ten minutes later found the worthies concealed—except McAlpin, detained at the barn—lined up at Jake Spotts' bar.

Jake, still on crutches, was hobbling around.

"How's the leg, Jake?" asked Sawdy, to be polite.

"By rights I ought to be in bed, but I can't afford it."

"Have you sen Barney Rebstock this evenin'?" asked Lefever, casually.

Spotts' face darkened—he, too, hated Barney. "I ain't seen him, and don't ask nothin' like that to make me swear. Boys," he added, addressing the group, "you know Panama spent a whole year tryin' to break me of my bad habit of swearin'. Now, when it's too late for him to know, I'm goin' to quit swearin'. I give public notice, here and now, if any d—d man gets me so angry I've got to swear, I'm not goin' to cuss him out, like I used to. No! I'm just goin' to lick h—l out of him then and there, so you fellows can tell the boys what to expect."

At that moment the back screen door banged on its hinges and McAlpin, sharp-faced, keen-eyed, and out of breath, rushed into the room. With much celerity and many patomimic gestures, the Scotsman drew Sawdy far into an empty corner of the saloon. "What's up, Scotty?"

"He's in there," whispered McAlpin. "He's in there right now!"

"Who?"

"Barney!"

"Where?"

"In Barney's saloon! I seen the sorrel standin' at the hitch rack in front when I come along up street to join you here, so I went in. Hurry, he's there!"

Certain of Milady's Vote

THREE post-election candidates for milady's wardrobe, every one a winner. Choose any one of these clever patterns and the vote will be unanimous that you have done well by yourself. Every pattern is accompanied by an illustrated instruction chart giving step by step details for quick sewing and perfect fit—the short cut to an adequate wardrobe.

Pattern 1821, a comely morning frock fashioned along princess lines, is available in a wide range of sizes, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. The smooth fitting and slenderizing hip line joins with the scalloped collar and cuffs in contrast to achieve a flattering effect, and this design is so simply made and so easy to wear, in swiss or percale or lawn or pongee, it will win instant favor. Size 38 requires four and three-fourths yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1958, the blouse and skirt combination, speaks for itself. Versatility is the keynote of this double duty pattern which consists of just eight simple pieces for both blouse and skirt. The wide and graceful revers conceal those extra pounds above the waist, and the panelled skirt is of the sort that will go well with any ensemble or tunic. Quickly and inexpensively made, this combination will add new life to any wardrobe with a minimum of effort. The pattern is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 18 requires two and three-fourths yards of 39 inch material for the blouse, two and one-sixth yards for the skirt. A grand pattern bargain.

Pattern 1843, the fitted slip, offers a choice of the strap or built-up shoulder and makes a perfect foundation garment for a smooth silhouette. Fashioned in silk or taffeta or pongee, the pattern employs just six pieces and goes together like a charm. Send for it today, in size 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 or 44. Size 36 requires three and one-fourth yards of 39 inch material.

Of Course!
The train was just pulling out when the breathless lad dashed to the ticket window. "Hurry up," he gasped, "gimme a round trip ticket!"

Stomach Gas So Bad Seems To Hurt Heart

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never feel better."
—Mrs. Jas. Miller.
Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas, pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.
Dr. H. L. Shoad, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation. Leading Druggists.

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood
YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Corned Beef and Plagiarism
HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—The luncheon of our Writers' Club, Inc., (Red Inc.) is a weekly function, with corned beef and cabbage and plagiarism charges. This week we had with us the leading fiction writer of the Pacific slope—Mr. Daingerfield, the local weather forecaster.

Another guest was William A. Brady, the grand old man of the American stage, with great tales of the ancient days, when, to qualify as a trouper, one had to be a pedestrian. Before they asked you whether you could act, they found out what kind of a walker you were. But how many of those sure-footed California beginners counted crossties as they trudged into enduring fame? Belasco and Tom Wise and Frank Bacon and many another.

We also welcomed some new members. We're very exclusive. There are groups here that'll take in people who even failed to make the Book of the Month club. But to join up with us, you must have written something significant—insurance or promissory notes or booster slogans. We're angling now for a distinguished new figure in the field of literature. He does sky-writing, by the way.

New Deal's 3rd Birthday.
THIS being the third anniversary of the New Deal, I was just thinking that, whether or not it lived through the early part of next November, its folks could never reproach themselves that they'd failed to give their darling babykins the best nursing money could buy. Just then who should rush in but Michael Strogoff, the courier of the czar, shouting that the U. S. marines had just landed with a contradiction of the terrifically exciting announcement made only yesterday by the same fellow who took the message to Garcia that time—

Hold on, I'm getting all twisted. What I'm trying to say is that one day the word for a palpatating planet was that Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., was positively going to marry Lady Ashley, whereas but 24 hours before, he positively was not going to marry Lady Ashley. Then finally he did it.

Main Street Ambition
ONE hears San Francisco would lure more inhabitants in an effort to overtake Los Angeles. But why?

And why do Americans get drunk on population statistics? It's their head-iest tittle. Every time Uncle Sam looses his census figures, some towns go into mourning because they haven't grown any faster and other towns have public dancing in the streets because a swarm of new people have moved in to make traffic congested and living inconvenient and pleasant neighborhoods crowded.

Offhand, I think of but one city whose ruling citizens mainly are content with things as they are—the lovely and fascinating city of Charleston. Elsewhere we appear to share with the red ants the mad passion to take on addition red ants until the anthill overflows and all the old resident ants are lost in the shuffle.

Feminine Bank Rolls
WHY can't people mind their own business? A merchandising expert, who probably was just sitting around the house during the cold spell with nothing to do except feed the stove, made an exhaustive inquiry to find out what American women carry in their handbags. He now reports that, in addition to gobs of other things including lipstick, cigarettes, hairpins and recipes, the average woman's pocketbook contains $6.74 in cash.

It was perhaps all right for the gentleman to satisfy his morbid curiosity. Where he erred was in making his discovery public. Just consider how busy the boys in congress will be, thinking up new taxes, when they hear about that much money still being in circulation.

Better Films Council Previewing Com. Reports on Films

The previewing committees of the Better Films Council attended the first performance of the first run theatres in Chicago. Following is their recommendations for the family: "The Magnificent Brute" This is designated as a man's picture, dealing with the steel industry. There are remarkable steel mill scenes with plenty of comedy relief for the fighting sequences. Perhaps too exciting for small children.

"Ramona", "Second Wife" and "Two in a Crowd." For Adults and Young Adults: "Adventure in Manhattan", "Cain and Mable", "Hollywood Boulevard", "Ladies in Love", "Libeled Lady", "A Son Comes Home", "Thirty-six Hours to Kill". For Adults: "Give Me Your Heart", "Jailbreak" and "Valiant is the Word for Carrie". This last named picture is the story of a regeneration of a soul, outstanding film which is beautifully made. Highly recommended for adults.

Pueblo, Col. Leads In Safety Contest

Pueblo, Colo., on October 1 was leading a parade of 41 American cities which had not experienced a single automobile traffic accident death. The Colorado city is the largest of the group, none of which have a population smaller than 10,000, the National Safety Council said.

Reports in the National Traffic Safety Council which has enrolled more than 1,000 cities showed that Pueblo was the only city in the 50,000 to 100,000 population group with a perfect traffic safety record for the nine months.

The Council said four cities in the 25,000 to 50,000 group, led by West New York, N. J., had not had the records blackened by an accident death. The others were Wilmington, N. C., Bloomington, Ill., and NewKport, R. I.

Wausau, Wis., was the largest of 36 cities in the 10,000 to 25,000 group reported as having perfect records for the period.

Armistice Day—1936
By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

For almost twenty years our nation has observed Armistice Day—with its eloquent reminder that the spirit of America is peace.

It is one of the most solemn of our national holidays—born of a period when America had reached a flood-tide of idealism.

Originally this observance expressed a spirit of thanksgiving for the ending of a grim and tragic war fought far beyond our national boundaries. But, with the years, it has developed a further meaning. It has become also a reminder of the need for peace and tranquility within the nation, and for the spirit of patriotic citizenship which we honor at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

At this time, as always, the American people can re-dedicate themselves to that spirit, and to the high concept of citizenship it demands.

At this time they can determine to submerge differences based on conflicting aims and interests, and to think instead in terms of the welfare of the entire country. It is a time to remember that America was not built by one or by many separate groups, but by the people as a whole; a time to recall that public office remains a public trust, and that good citizenship entails responsibilities no less significant.

For America, as has been said, was a great land when Columbus discovered it. It became a great nation when the American people made it one.

Armistice Day, 1936, reminds us again of that solemn and inspiring truth.

Party Line-Ups in 10 Congresses

This chart shows how Republicans and Democrats will share seats in both houses of seventy-fifth congress, as compared with nine preceding congresses.

Election Sets a New Record With 43,000,000 Votes Cast

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, elected to a second term by a greater plurality than any candidate has ever enjoyed in the past, finds himself now with perhaps more power than has ever before been trusted to any man in the world. He polled some 25,500,000 popular votes, to set a new all-time record. Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, his Republican opponent, was a bit shy of 16,000,000, while William Lemke, the Union party candidate, polled about three-fourths of a million.

These results were based upon 107,309 districts reported out of the 122,722 in the United States. It was estimated that the total vote, with all districts reported, would approximate 43,000,000 also a new all-time record.

The American people, providing the incumbent Democratic candidate with 523 votes in the electoral college to 8 for Governor Landon, also voiced their approval of the New Deal by materially increasing the Democratic majority in both houses of congress.

The senate in the Seventy-fifth congress will find the Democrats with 75 of the 96 seats, outnumbering the opposition more than 4 to 1. The house of representatives, where the Republicans had hoped to recover as much as 125 seats, will see the Democrats even stronger than before, holding 334 seats against 89 for the G. O. P.

PRESIDENTIAL VOTE BY STATES

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt swept to re-election on the crest of the largest wave of votes, both popular and electoral, ever cast for a Presidential candidate. It was apparent with 105,251 districts reported out of a total of 122,722 in the United States. The table below shows the number of districts reporting in each state, the popular vote, the electoral vote and the winner's plurality in each state. Pluralities are estimated, since in most cases complete returns will not be available for some time:

Sportsmen's League Issues Bulletin On Sportsmanship

Fellow Members of the Will County Sportsmen's League:

In order that every member of The League may have the best hunting season he has ever had in Will County and understand his duty as a member of The League as well as his obligation to his fellow sportsmen and fellow farmer-members, it was decided that a letter stating some of these duties and obligations be sent to every member.

Some things to be borne in mind, especially during the coming hunting season are:

1. Members wishing to hunt on ANY farmer's property shall first ask the farmer's permission and if granted shall leave his car in the farmer's yard and never by the roadside.
2. When hunting on any farmer's property, the farmer's wishes with regard to the number in the party, kind and amount of game to be killed, and any other stipulation made by him, shall be complied with at all times.
3. Farmer's cooperation with other members of The League is appreciated and urged, but membership in The League DOES NOT OBLIGATE any farmer to permit any other member or anyone to hunt on his property.
4. Each farmer should make an effort to know the amount of game that is on his property and should not permit over-shooting of that game, in order that a good supply of breeding stock may be retained for the following year.
5. Each farmer-member of The League is urged to insist that ONLY members of The League who are able to present a membership card shall be allowed to hunt on his property as The League cannot exert any influence nor feel any responsibility for the conduct of anyone who is not a member of The League.
6. Every member shall be expected to abide by the game code and the Sportsmen's Creed (printed on the back of each membership card), and is expected to report any violation of either, by anyone, to The League.
7. The League has brought about the appointment of over forty deputy sheriffs throughout Will County for the purpose of enforcing the game code and protecting the farmer-member's property against trespassers. Farmer-members are advised to acquaint themselves with their local deputy sheriff-members in order that they will immediately know who to call if an officer is needed.

Every member is urged to take an active part and assist in the conservation program sponsored by The League as only in this way can better hunting and fishing conditions and an understanding, pleasant relationship among sportsmen from both the city and the farm be brought about.

Yours very truly,
ERNEST W. WUNDERLICH,
Secretary

The children have drawn some Indians and turkeys. Joe Lombardo of the third grade and Nancy Lombardo of the first grade are new pupils in the primary room.

Intermediate Room: The Intermediate room enjoyed a Halloween party last Thursday. Donald and Helen Egerton received the prizes for being the best dressed. The children played games and then refreshments were served. Everyone had an enjoyable time. Three new students entered the intermediate room Vito and Philip Lombardo. The room is very attractively decorated with pictures, posters, turkeys, and pilgrims appropriate for the month of November. The good work corner shows the work done by the pupils.

Jr. High Room: Robert Benson gave a very interesting talk to the Jr. High room on his trip to Hot Springs, Arkansas. Everyone enjoyed it very much. Booklets are on display in the Jr. High room made by the eighth grade English class. They are written on the subjects chosen by the students.

High School Room: The Sophomore class is making a newspaper of the doings of Silas Marner. We have several interesting items. This is a project for English.

There was no school last Friday because of the teachers attending institute in Joliet.

The Freshmen have been studying Treasure Island by Stevenson for English. In the study they made pictures of the Admiral Benbow Inn in the story and the ship. Several were very good. Also maps of Treasure Island were drawn and in Physiology excellent pictures of the organs of the body were made. The best of these drawings were put on the board in the front of the room.

A moving picture was shown at the school auditorium Thursday, Nov. 5, at 1 o'clock. It showed Admiral Byrd's second expedition. Lieut. Cox, a member of the party, was there in person. It was very well attended.

Performance, Beauty and Safety Mark Chevrolet's Completely New Cars

Chevrolet's 1937 engine is completely new, but adheres closely to time-proved Chevrolet engineering principles. It is of six-cylinder valve-in-head type, smoother, more powerful, more economical, and lighter.

A representative model from Chevrolet's new line, typifying its beauty and grace—the Master De Luxe Sedan with trunk. Note the distinctive "speed line" extending back from the side of the hood.

Unisteel construction joins the floor, cowl assembly, panels, and Turret Top of Chevrolet's all-silent, all-steel body, to form one integral structure, welded in all joints, and reinforced and braced for permanent silence and safety.

Beauty and utility mark the new Chevrolet instrument panel. The windshield is of greater area, with narrow corner posts, affording better vision.

Luggage capacity in Chevrolet's new trunk models has been greatly increased, as has interior luggage space in other models.

New power, economy, durability, safety and comfort, coupled with striking new beauty, characterize Chevrolet's new models for 1937. They are offered in two series, Master and Master De Luxe, virtually identical in appearance.

Chevrolet's fully-enclosed Knee-Action is furnished at no extra cost on the Master De Luxe models; and new Synchro-Mesh transmission, and safety plate glass all around at no extra cost, feature all models of both series.

When you drive your car out of your garage are you sure that it is in A-No. 1 shape?

"Four wheels and no brakes" applies to many individual vehicles. Brakes should be adjusted periodically. Your lighting apparatus should meet these requirements: good headlights, properly adjusted so as to give the greatest convenience in driving, and a well charged battery that will make these lights function as they should. Rear view mirrors are a necessity and should be properly directed. The steering gear should operate easily. Keep it adjusted so that your car responds as you want it to.

In general, be ever on the alert for minor evidences of faulty equipment, and when discovered have it adjusted promptly.

RECORD CROWDS GATHER FOR AUTO SHOW

The eyes of the world are literally focused upon motordom's classic, the 37th annual Chicago Automobile Show, opening Saturday afternoon Nov. 14 and continuing for eight days thru Nov. 21st in the International Amphitheatre, Halsted and 43rd streets.

Surpassing all previous achievements, the current show has an international aspect, with its "Brides of the Nations" revue at the dominant attraction in the huge central arena. Twenty-one nations are represented in the brilliant spectacle, and dignitaries of those countries are being honored during the show. In addition to the almost countless thousands of Chicagoans, the show is a magnet for motorists from throughout the middle west, along with automobile factory executives and dealers. The attendance quota is set at 300,000. Heavy advance arrivals have packed the large hotels almost to capacity with those intent upon viewing this sensational show which is destined to go down in history as the industry's supreme triumph.

Unique in its showmanship, the "Brides of the Nations" revue serves to glorify the newest creations of motordom for 1937. While 12,000 pairs of eyes look on in the central arena, six of the sleek new automobiles, one at a time, appear before the crowd upon announcement of what the spectacle is to portray. The cars make their way up an incline roadway, stop in front of the "International Mansion" at the east end, and out of each steps a foreign bride and her bridesmaids. They disappear within the 60 X 80 foot mansion to make their appearance later in the breath-taking ensemble.

Meanwhile, the car in front of the mansion revolves slowly while its salient features are briefly described. It then continues down another inclined roadway to await its

Also a part of this grand climax is a parade of the brides along a 100-foot stage and down a stairway at the end to re-enter the cars in which they made their appearance.

For sheer originality and showmanship, this revue, attended by stirring music of Cavallo's symphonic band, gorgeous decorations, lighting and stage effects, far surpasses all previous efforts in Chicago or

The new cars will go on display next Saturday at Ford dealer showrooms throughout the United States.

Ford V-8 for 1937 will set at rest definitely rumors of a new "baby" Ford which have been circulated in the automobile industry for the past several years.

The new cars will be available in both deluxe and standard body types on the single Ford V-8 112-inch wheelbase chassis.

Beyond the new appearance and the two engine sizes, two other features mark the new 1937 cars. One is a new all-steel body, with new one-piece steel top, as well as steel structure, panels and floor. The other is a new braking system, designed by Ford to give "soft" easy-action control.

A new club coupe is the latest of the eleven body types which will be available. The five most popular types will be offered with or without deluxe equipment, and with either engine. The other six will be available only with deluxe equipment and only with the 85-horsepower engine.

There you find a hospital where the most painstaking care is executed in giving all patients the best of attention at all times.

In this day and age of modern living we are faced at times with the difficulty of properly taking care of the sick and those who have received bodily harm. It is for these many needs that this modern hospital was built. People have come to know that their chances for longer life are 100 per cent more when cared for in a modern hospital such as this one, than the old methods of treatments, especially when so little time is spent in the homes.

Here you have a staff of trained nurses whose years of training and experience is at your disposal. When under their care you can be assured of proper and regular treatment, taken care of according to the strict orders of the doctor attending. When you think of a hospital, think of St. Francis hospital.

However, we must stop to consider the hundreds of lives this hospital is actually saving each year in this community. If you are unfortunate in an accident or in sickness, call St. Francis hospital.

Reviewing, as we are the most outstanding institutions of this section in this progressive review, we would surely feel we had not done our part had we not made prominent mention of this modern hospital.

Lincoln and Son Tad

© 1936, The Lincoln Nat'l Life Ins. Co.

The second of a series of humanized Lincoln paintings, "Lincoln and Son Tad," has just been completed for The Lincoln National Life Insurance Company by Frederic Mizen, well-known Chicago artist. The picture is a pleasing presentation of the kindly man who has been called "most human of all our Presidents."

The artist has succeeded in securing an unusual quality of reality in this work which adds greatly to its interest. The only other pictures of Lincoln and Tad available are photographs or copies of photographs. Photography in Lincoln's time was in its infancy and making a picture necessitated long exposures and careful posing. Under such conditions the spontaneous mood of the moment was rarely, if ever, recorded.

Lincoln's kindness to children, others as well as his own, has become proverbial and it is hoped that this painting will serve as a reminder of his kindness which was as great a part of his character as honesty and integrity.

The Ladies Guild of the M. E. church will sponsor a bake sale in Loebe's store next Saturday Nov. 21st at 2-00 p. m. Loads of good things to eat. Come all!

Roy Newton is preparing to move this week onto the Stahulik farm on 143rd street west of Orland.

Betty Yunker entertained a group of friends at a party one night the past week.

The R. N. A. Juveniles held a meeting Tuesday night in the Creer hall. Bunco was the chief diversion. Refreshments were served. Those on the committee were Marie Heiting, chairman, Eleanor Knox and Donald Uthe.

The Juveniles recently held a Halloween party in the basement of the Ray Doctor home. All enjoyed a good time.

Last week an item appeared in this column regarding a game warden confiscating the guns of a number of hunters when they entered the local forest preserve. Our attention has been called to the fact that the game warden made a mistake in the case of two Orland boys, Ray Glahn and Harold Kay. He thought they were on forest preserve property and not knowing where the forest preserve line is at Orland, he confiscated their guns thinking they were in the forest preserve. Later he was convinced of his error and the boys mentioned were fully exonerated and their guns were returned to them.

The Bible class of the Orland Park M. E. church held a social meeting in the Creer hall Wednesday night. A delightful time is reported.

The Armistice Day dance sponsored by the Orland Park Legion Post at the Goodings Grove dance hall Wednesday night was very largely attended.

The Orland Park Child Welfare Clinic which was to have been held Wednesday was held on Monday instead as Armistice Day fell on the original date.

A goodly number of Orland folks have visited the new funeral home of Harris and Schmadeke in Joliet. Orville Schmadeke, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schmadeke of Orland Park has been engaged in the undertaking business for sometime and recently joined Mr. Eugene Harris well known mortician of Joliet.

Barney Moore will hold a pinochle party at his place on Tuesday night, November 19th.

istice Day.

A synopsis of the play "Thanks, Awfully" which will be presented by the high school for the Achievement Day program is as follows:

Besides disliking women, Richard has a low opinion of their intelligence. He tells his sister that one could easily get thru one of her parties and not use more than two words. His sister wagers he can't, and Richard picks out "Thanks Awfully" as his words.

The ladies arrive in chattering groups and all go for the only man—Richard. He manages quite well on his two words, until the girl friend with whom he has quarreled appears!

Be sure you come to see the stately, impressive types of ladies; the lispers, the flapper, the gusher and all the rest.

TINLEY PARK

The R. Bagby family will leave Saturday for a two weeks trip to Florida to visit with Mrs. Bagby's sister and family.

Mr. Geo. J. Ebenhack of Coldwater, Michigan, who has spent the summer in the home of his son, Omar C. Ebenhack, returned to his home last week.

Fifteen friends of Mrs. Wm. Clemens gathered in her home last Friday to help her celebrate her birthday. Bunco was played and refreshments were served. All had a nice time. Many beautiful gifts were given to Mrs. Clemens.

Tuesday evening, the R. N. A. held their regular social meeting, as from now on, the social meeting will be the first meeting of the month, instead of the second.

Mrs. J. Keleher entertained the Sewing Club in her home Monday afternoon. A pleasant time was had.

Mrs. F. Schmiedeknecht entertained in her home Wednesday afternoon. Mesdames, Miller, Becker, Schaefer and Clemens.

Mrs. Fred Hopman entertained the Tinley Park Bunco Club in her home Thursday afternoon.

The Misses Helen and Esther Stover are working in Hyde Park, Chicago.

Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Becker and her husband from Kenosha, Wis., spent a week here with her parents.

The Music Hour Club of the Tinley Park school rendered two numbers for the Illinois Farm Institute program. We sang, "Come to the Fair" by Martin and "Your Land" by Rhombert. Mrs. Henke surprised us with ten dollars for our part in the program.

Marian Mabey, Press chairman.

Armistice Day was very quietly observed here. The only business place closed for the day was the Bremen State Bank. All banks and city municipal offices were closed but post offices and all other lines of business were in operation as usual. In Tinley, the local Legion Post placed large American flags along the principal streets.

An improvement which the farmers greatly appreciate is the recent installation of a new motor truck dump in the Brueggeman grain elevator. This new dump is a big labor saver. Formerly all truck loads of grain had to be shoveled off by hand. Geo. Schreiber attended the funeral.

A ROBBER MEETING

IT WAS night in the big barn. It was the night of Billy Mink's visit when he had killed the big rat there. As soon as Billy had left the barn the gray old leader of the rats had sent word around that all the rats in the barn should meet him at once at their usual meeting place under the floor.

As soon as the word was received each member of the robber band hurried to the meeting place. They knew why the gray old leader had called them together, and as they hurried to the meeting place there was fear in the heart of each one of them. It was long since fear had been known in the big barn. It was the first time some of them had ever experienced fear. You see, they had been so well taught how to avoid traps and poison that they did not fear those things. They had made the cat afraid of them, so they did not fear the cat. It was no trouble at all to keep out of the way of the farmer, so they did not fear the farmer.

As Soon as All the Rats Had Answered His Call, the Gray Old Leader Began to Speak.

But this slim, brown enemy who had entered their den so boldly and had run down and killed one of their number had brought with him fear. So, as from every direction the rats scurried to that meeting place, they continually looked behind them for that slim, brown creature, who moved so swiftly and from whom even their gray old leader had run away. Most of them did not know who Billy Mink was, for they had always lived in that big barn, and no one at all like Billy had ever been there before.

As soon as all the rats had answered his call the gray old leader began to speak. "I have called this meeting," said he, "to decide what we had best do. A terrible enemy has come among us and, as you know, has killed one of our number. He has left the big barn, as I know, because I watched him. For the time being we are quite safe. But when he again becomes hungry he will return."

"Who is he?" squeaked a young rat. "He didn't look very big to me. If we all get together, I don't see why we should be afraid of him. We drove out that cat and that cat is a great deal bigger than this fellow. Who is he, anyway?"

"He is Billy Mink," replied the gray old leader gravely. "And who is Billy Mink?" squeaked another half-grown young robber.

"He is sure death to any rat he may start out to catch," replied the old leader. "He belongs to the Weasel family and all members of this family are enemies of the rat tribe, and more to be feared than any other enemy we have."

"Why can't we hide when he comes?" asked another young robber. "I never have seen any one I couldn't hide from."

"Then, unless I am greatly mistaken, you are likely to have a chance," snapped the leader.

NOODLE AND MACARONI DISHES

IN FAMILIES where meat is too expensive to buy often, the following dishes will furnish all the flavor of the meat with a small amount of it:

Chili Noodles.

The noodles may be homemade (which are probably cheaper if used in large quantity) or the package noodles. Cook as many as are needed in boiling salted water, drain and add the following: One small onion chopped, also one green pepper, one pound of round steak cut into inch pieces, brown in two tablespoonfuls of suet, then add one-half cupful strained tomato, one cupful of water, one cupful of cooked kidney beans, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne pepper. Heat thoroughly and serve with grated cheese.

Veal Paprika With Noodles.

Take five ounces or more of noodles, cook in salted water until tender, then drain. Sprinkle four or five cutlets of veal with salt and pepper and dip into egg and crumbs. Fry in a little butter until well cooked. Make a sauce of two table-

UNUSUAL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

INVITED up some folks last week To see a sample of our climate, Of which I often highly speak, In hours poetic even rime it, They landed in a burning sun, The hottest known in many seasons, And so my boasting days are done, For many reasons.

The sun went down, the clouds came up, The rain began to run in rivers, And, when we sat us down to sup, The guests began to get the shivers. Just what they thought that night of me, Who bragged about this place of places, They did not say, but I could see It in their faces.

And then we had three days of fog (I'd bragged of sun, times without number). The foghorn blew, that croaking frog, And no one got a wink of slumber. It rained from seven until ten, And then it blazed from ten till seven.

I'll never boost a place again, Not even Heaven.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

AS YOUR understanding of the language of the hand increases, you'll find its practical application helpful as well as entertaining. Knowledge of the significance of the types of hands alone will inform you of their owner's characteristics and enable you to gauge both business and social contacts with certainty as to the kind of man or woman you are dealing with.

The Spatulate Type of Hand.

This type will be readily recognized by its irregular shape, which is sometimes most noticeable on the palm side, in the space bounded by the base of the fingers, the wrist and edges of the palm.

The fingers and thumb of this type may vary, in some hands being of medium length, in others possessing surprising length. The fingers, as well as thumb, however, are characteristically broad and chisel shaped, with large, flat pads on the side opposite and extending beyond the nail. The thumb is somewhat loose-looking and more often than not is of almost abnormal length from the beginning of the nail joint to the nail tip.

The men or women whose hands are of this type are usually inclined to restlessness if their creative and emotional natures are held too much in conventional restraint. The spatulate type, with palm much wider at the finger base than wrist, indicates a fair measure of emotional control. When the reverse occurs, there is apt to be a decided tendency toward impetuous speech and conduct.

Those with spatulate type hands are happiest and most successful in activities which loose their tremendous powers of energy, quick thinking, originality and creative abilities amid surroundings that are as free as possible from conventional restraints.

A Tough Life—That of a Forest Ranger

The life of a forest ranger is not all it's cracked up to be. Instead of spending the summer hunting, fishing and trapping, the ranger is busy protecting game and scenery from visitors and answering their questions.

In the winter, he and another ranger hole themselves up in a log cabin, patrol the boundary of their domain on skis and protect the wild life under their care from the attacks of predatory animals and the guns of men. At night their leisure time is spent in assembling food, wood and clothing to keep warm, and preparing for the next day's tasks.—Washington Post.

Lesson for November 15

THE HEROISM OF CHRISTIAN FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:12, 13, 27-34; Romans 9:1-5.

GOLDEN TEXT—Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. John 15:13.

PRIMARY TOPIC—On the Castle Steps.

JUNIOR TOPIC—On the Castle Steps.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Taking Risks for Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Rising All for Christ.

We now come to the close of the third missionary journey of Paul. As he came to Jerusalem for the last time in his eventful life he was warned by a prophet, Agabus at Caesarea, that if he went up to Jerusalem he would be bound and given over to the Gentiles.

Heroism of the highest and noblest type has characterized the followers of Christ in all times. Paul was not one to be deterred from what he believed to be God's will by the probability that he would suffer. Like all who follow the Lord Jesus Christ in truth he was

I. Fearless, in Practice as Well as Theory (Acts 21:12, 13, 27-34).

Many there are who sing, "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord, I'll be what you want me to be," or smoothly repeat consecration vows, who are frightened away at the slightest difficulty, and who feel that they must have been mistaken about the Lord's will for their life at the first indication that his guidance would interfere with their comfort or convenience. No such cowardice or vacillation was found in Paul.

In the first place, he did not intend to have a holy purpose weakened by disheartening talk. How many young men and women have left a place of sacred meeting with God aglow with the purpose of serving Him in the foreign mission field, and then permitted an uninterested friend or relative or employer to talk them out of it.

In the second place, we find Paul carrying through his purpose. When he came to Jerusalem he was counseled to enter the temple to take a Nazarite vow, and thus to satisfy his enemies. Some have commended Paul for thus pacifying those who withstood him, others strongly condemn him for yielding. His purpose was good, but his act led to unfortunate results. An infuriated Jewish mob saw him in the temple and wrongfully accused him of defiling the temple by bringing a Greek into this holy place.

A riot ensues, and Paul would have been killed had not the Roman captain and his band rescued him. Was Paul afraid? He immediately turned his arrest into an unsurpassed opportunity to give a testimony and to make a defense of his ministry (See Acts 21:40-22:22). He admonished others to "be instant in season and out of season" (II Tim. 4:2); he practiced what he preached. He constantly urged faith in God, steadfastness in the midst of trials; he gave full proof of these things in his own ministry.

In all this he did not seek his own glory, or any honor for his own name. The Christian hero knows nothing of heroism for publicity's sake; he does not serve with an eye on the "grandstand." Paul was actuated by a deep and a genuine

II. Concern for the Salvation of His People (Rom 9:1-5).

The Christian worker who knows nothing of "great sorrow and unceasing pain" in his heart over the plight of the unsaved does not follow in the Pauline succession, nor does he know the heart of the Man of Sorrows.

Paul surely did not wish himself separated from Christ, but was so deeply moved that he said he "could wish" it—if it were not wrong—in order to save his brethren.

Do we need a revival of compassion in our churches, and in our own hearts, a yearning over the multitudes about us who are as sheep without a shepherd?

A Golden Link

A mother's love is indeed the golden link that binds youth to age, and he is still but a child, however time may have furrowed his cheek, or silvered his brow, who can yet recall with a softened heart, the fond devotion, or the gentle chidings, of the best friend that God ever gives us.

Love of Our Work

It is only those who do not know how to work that do not love it. To those who do it is better than play—it is religion.

Life

Life is not made up of great sacrifices of duties, but of little things of which smiles and kindness and small obligations given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart.—Sir Humphrey Davy.

Prejudices

Prejudices may be intense, but their lives are limited—to discover when they are dead and to bury them, is an important matter, and no unseemly tears should be shed at their funerals.

Animated Cartoons

THE first animal to appear in animated cartoons was neither Felix the Cat nor Mickey Mouse. It was a playful dachshund who had a weakness for eating German sausages.

The first real motion picture cartoon, drawn by John Randolph Bray, was a combination of cartoon characters and living persons. Released by Pathe Freres in 1912, it showed the misadventures of this gormandizing dachshund who kept on eating sausages until he finally exploded. It proved so successful that Bray drew 18 more similar cartoons within the next year.

Not very long after that, colored cartoons made their debut in motion picture theaters. The first one, released in 1916, was entitled "The Debut of Thomas Kat." It was the story of a kitten who had been taught by its mother how to catch mice. The kitten soon became so cocky about his abilities that he tackled a rat, with very tragic results.

These early drawings were made on transparent celluloid, the colors then being painted on the reverse side of the film. Such early attempts were a far cry from the quality of our present productions. Some of the newer "super-specials" like "The Three Little Pigs," drawn by men like Walt Disney, are bigger drawing cards than regular feature pictures, and occasionally make as much money as films produced by Hollywood's greatest stars.

Death at Sea

SCURVY is a disease we practically never hear about any more. But up to a hundred years ago it was one of the horrors of sea life. It was a slow, creeping scourge that made sailor's teeth fall out, robbed them of their energy and pep, and finally made them sink into a lethargic lassitude that often ended in death.

On long voyages, it was not unusual for half the crew of a sailing ship to die of this mysterious disease. We know now that scurvy is caused by lack of vitamin C in the diet. But two centuries ago, when salt pork and hard tack were standard ship fare, and cream of tartar and elixir of vitriol were the usual medical treatment, its cause was "unexplainable."

Captain Hawkins, of the Royal British navy, the man who first found an effective cure for scurvy, was not a physician and knew practically nothing about medicine. In 1593, while in command of a ship on a long sea voyage to Africa, many of his crew fell ill with the dread disease. Without avail, the ship's doctor administered all the remedies then known to medical science.

As a last resort, Captain Hawkins broke out a case of limes from cargo, and ordered the sailors to suck them. Miraculously most of them recovered in short order.

The only thing left to commemorate Hawkins' act is the fact that the British sailors are still called "limeys."

The Pain-Killer

PICTURE the hospital operating room of a century ago: hooks, rings and pulleys cover the walls. Operating tables have straps and ropes to prevent patients from squirming while receiving surgical attention.

Anesthesia has not yet been invented. The man who needs an operation must bear the excruciating pain while fully conscious.

The first man to develop a successful anesthetic was Dr. W. T. G. Morton, a dentist. He had learned about the pain-killing properties of ether from watching medical students go on "ether jags," where they became dizzy and sometimes even "passed out."

After trying out ether successfully on several of his dental patients, Morton gave a public demonstration at a Boston hospital in 1846. Before a crowded room of skeptical doctors he administered the ether to a patient, then stepped aside for a surgeon friend of his to perform the operation.

A breathless silence fell over the room as the surgeon poised his gleaming scalpel and began to operate. There were no screams of tortured anguish that doctors were accustomed to hearing. It seemed almost like magic. "Gentlemen," said the surgeon as he finished, "this is no humbug. I have seen something today which will go round the world." The audience broke out in thunderous applause.

So was completed the first operation under an anesthetic. Dr. Morton, its sponsor, had probably done more than any other single man in the history of the world to alleviate misery and pain.

Use of Tourmaline

Tourmaline occurs in a variety of colors and is the national stone of Brazil. It is one of the few gems used in the industries, being made into tourmaline tongs for measuring the emanations from radium, in optical work and in the radio industry.

Freedom for Elders—

The Ruling of Parents by Grown Children Often Amounts to Tyranny

RECENTLY, says a woman writer of note, I read a letter from a young married woman, who, having a house in which she evidently took pride, and large enough to accommodate her mother, was disturbed. She resented the fact that her mother refused to live there, although she had been invited to do so. She complained of her mother's travels, and her insistence in keeping her own home.

It was impossible not to consider what were the reasons underlying the invitation. The young woman said her friends thought the situation strange, and she feared they blamed her for not having her mother with her. Such super-sensitiveness is certainly a mistake. It can scarcely be taken as the real reason for her annoyance. The home atmosphere would scarcely be improved by having a reluctant member included in the family life, even though the husband agreed to it willingly.

Money Matters.

A reason of money might exist. That is, there is a lurking suggestion that the daughter disliked the mother being at the added expense of keeping up her home, and spending money in travels, which went as far as European trips. The letter said that the mother's health was good. Could it be that the money saved by the mother should she live with the daughter, would revert to the daughter? Or would the mother be expected to pay board, or make some contribution to the home, although of a less stipulated sum?

Whatever the fundamental reason for the daughter's dilemma, one cannot but sympathize with the mother. Here is a woman who cherishes her freedom, and is enjoying it evidently. Either she had been accustomed to traveling, and keeps it up, or she has not been able to indulge her longing to see the world, until now, when she is free to do so and has the wherewithal.

A great deal has been said and written about letting children have their right of freedom of action and ideas. It is not they alone that must have this privilege. Parents, when they get older are often ruled with rods of iron by the children who were themselves granted freedom. This ruling of elders is often under the guises of affectionate care, and a patronizing kindness and it sometimes becomes a tyranny, especially over mothers. Such situations are indeed difficult.

EVERY car owner who does much driving over unimproved roads and who has to use chains, can save the cost and bother of applying them by equipping the rear wheels of his car or truck with Firestone Ground Grip Tires. This wonderful new tire was designed and developed by Harvey S. Firestone working with his engineers on his own farm in Columbiana County, Ohio. It was tested on all kinds of roads and found so efficient that it was also adopted for tractors and all wheeled farm implements.

The rubber lugs of the tread are so placed that they clean as they pull, and since the design is continuous, the tire does not bump when used on paved roads. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords are placed under the tread — a patented Firestone construction feature which welds the powerful super-traction tread to the patented Gum-Dipped cord body, making them one inseparable unit. Gum-Dipping is used only in Firestone tires.

Farmers, country doctors, school bus operators, rural mail carriers, in fact, all who do most of their driving off the paved roads cannot afford to be without Ground Grip Tires. Go to your nearest Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today and equip your car or truck with Firestone Ground Grip Tires — the tire that makes its own road.

MOKENA

Last Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, Miss Loretta Erickson, daughter of Mr. Chas. Erickson, and Howard Martie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Martie of Mokena, were united in marriage in the home of the bride's father.

Rev. Theo. Haeefe, pastor of St. John Evangelical church of Mokena officiated, the double ring ceremony being used.

The bride was becomingly gowned in an ensemble of brown silk crepe with a shoulder corsage of yellow roses. She was attended by her sister, Evelyn, who was gowned in green silk crepe and wore a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Alvin Kohl acted as best-man.

Following the ceremony, a four-course dinner was served, the immediate members of the two families being the guests, which numbered eighteen.

The home was beautifully decorated in the bride's colors, yellow and white, with crepe paper streamers and flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Martie departed at a late hour for their home on the farm on Wolf road which Mr. Martie has been farming.

The many friends of the couple extend wishes for many years of happiness, health and prosperity.

Members of the Mokena Camp of the Royal Neighbors will entertain their husbands at a card and bunco party at the Mokena school auditorium on Tuesday evening, Nov. 17 at 8 p. m.

To Hold Card Party

A card and bunco party will be held in the St. Michael church hall in Orland Park November 21st. Poultry will be given for prizes.

The Title "Esquire"

The title "esquire" comes from the Latin through old French. It was derived from escu, a word now spelled ecu, which means a shield. The title esquire was given to a shield bearer or an attendant of a knight.

Longest Bridge in World

The longest railway bridge in the country, as well as the world, is the Huey Long bridge spanning the Mississippi river north of New Orleans. It is 4.4 miles long with a water span of 3,524 feet, 135 feet above the water at high water. It cost nearly $20,000,000 and required three years to build.

The Earliest Bicycle

The forerunner of the bicycle was the "draisine," invented by Baron von Drais, a German, about the year 1816. It was composed of two tandem wheels of equal size, connected by a perch, and was propelled by a rider thrusting with his feet on the ground and guided by a bar connected with the front wheels.

"I'm doing my home work for our motor trip to Boston next week"

STUDY THE DANGER BRACKETS

One way to keep from being one of this year's 36,000 killed and 895,000 injured in automobile accidents is to learn where and how and when last year's accidents occurred and avoid such WHEREAS and HOWS and WHENES.

More than 85,000 accidents occurred last year on the wrong side of the road. All right, then, I, for one, am going to stay on the right side of the road and keep out of that group. More than 55,000 cars drove off the roadway to some sort of doom. All right; I'm going to drive slowly enough to stay on the road—and stay out of that group.

When I'm driving on a nice straight road, (I drive by speedometer not by "ear") I tell Mrs. Herold not to let me get a mile over 50, because I know that NINE out of TEN automobile accidents involving driving errors are caused by excessive speed. I'm told my car will do over 80, but 50 is my top on the best of roads. If it starts to rain or snow, I lower my maximum to 35 or 40.

If there are other cars on the road, I creep, if necessary, to play safe. I have no ego or pride or inclination to cheat, fudge or bluff.

I, personally, never drive at night if I can help it because the ratio of fatal accidents to total accidents during dusk and darkness is 64 per cent worse than for daytime accidents.

If I do drive at night, 35 miles an hour is my top on a good road, because I know that at 40 it will take me 115 feet to stop and that my headlights show clearly for only 100 feet, and I do not want to be driving 15 feet in the dark all the time.

As a pedestrian, I cross only at intersections and WITH the lights, because I know that the rate of death is 74 per cent worse against the signals than WITH them.

I get the above figures from The Travelers Insurance Company. There are several places to get similar statistics, and I suggest that you do get them and make a study and something of a science of staying alive in 1936.
